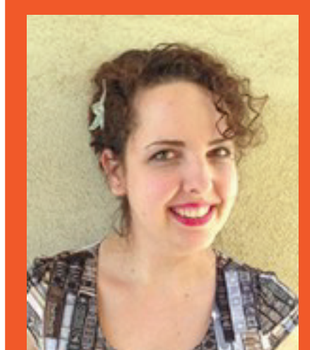
Moving Into the Digital Age:

Or How Come I Can't Check-Out These e-Books at the Library?

Join us for a panel discussion about what is currently happening in the world of digital and print publishing. Learn how digital rights management relates to libraries and how this affects the books you want to read. Also, what is this digital divide everyone is talking about?

Wednesday, October 30th
6:00 pm
Meeting Room A

Discussion Panel



Jessica Tribble is a publisher at Poisoned Pen Press, one of the largest publishers of hardcover mysteries in the country. She has a Master's in Renaissance Literature from ASU as well as a certificate in Scholarly Publishing and Editing. She joined Poisoned Pen Press in 2005 and is now the first point of contact to authors, seeing manuscripts from their inception to completion, and oversees all books Poisoned Pen publishes.

—www.poisonedpenpress.com

Shelly Coriell is a former newspaper reporter, magazine editor, and restaurant reviewer. These days she writes smart, funny novels for teens and big, edgy romantic suspense. A six-time Romance Writers of America Golden Heart Finalist, She lives in Arizona with her family and the world's neediest rescue weimaraner.

—www.shellycoriell.com

Patrick Moore is the Digital Content Sales Manager for Baker & Taylor. Baker & Taylor is the industry leading source for libraries purchasing print books and is the market leader in providing e-Books and downloadable audiobooks on its Axis 360 product. Patrick has been in the library e-Book industry for over a decade starting with the initial e-Book company, NetLibrary, in 2000.

—www.btol.com

Tempe Public Library www.tempe.gov/library